

During the day, the three levels are pulled out to create a market and shops. As some of the heavy machinery the producers use during the night is not needed during market times, they are not being pulled out with the levels but stay in their original position, attached to the walls. Effectively, they create an interesting space during the day. It becomes an empty 15 meter high space in with there are these hanging machines. With the sunlight they throw shadows onto the walls but also let the light fall through.
